of lawyers as essentially 'problem-solvers' that precedes their reputation as 'advocates', this course focuses on the problem-solving process employed by and demanded from the legal profession.

Legal research and writing are introduced to first year law students through the use of practical teaching method, student-centered active learning, and feedback mechanisms. Critical to building the foundations of students' competence are exposure to the areas of academic rigor and integrity, issue-spotting and framing, sources of law, purposive legal communication, and peer review.

B. COURSE LEARNING OUTCOMES

By the end of this course, students should be able to:

a. Identify sources of Philippine law and their relative authoritative values (Knowledge);
b. Express legal issues on the basis of given facts and applicable law (Skill);
c. Write literature review and scoping of legal sources, either individually or in groups, that exhibit competence on issue-spotting and framing, navigating sources of law, and purposive communication (Skill);
d. Review another's work on substantive and technical aspects with due professional courtesy (Skill); and
e. Understand the role of legal writing and the value of academic rigor and of collaboration in the study and practice of law (Attitude).
